The National Science Policy Network recognizes that change is needed in all levels of society, in every organization, to ensure that Black lives matter. This year's theme, Science Policy for Racial Justice, aims to address many of the ways in which both science and policy have historically failed to include minority voices and the ways in which science policy can be strategically leveraged for a more inclusive and equitable future for all. A central thread of the event will be the essential inclusion of racial justice in every conversation. Panel discussion topics will range from health policy to climate justice, public trust in science to graduate education reform, and international collaboration. Hands-on workshops will support the development of participants' skills for inclusive and accessible science communication, advocacy with academic and civic policy makers, and building robust transdisciplinary partnerships for powerful and diverse research communities. Together with social and professional networking opportunities online we hope this event will serve as yet another catalyst for concerted change as we build towards a more equitable and sustainable planet.

WHY BECOME A SPONSOR?

The NSPN Annual Symposium provides training and networking opportunities for early career scientists and engineers. Sponsorship of this event gives your organization the unique opportunity to directly interact with top students across the country who are interested in science policy and to support the next generation of science policy leaders. Your sponsorship is essential not only to make this event possible, but also to help us continue to provide new programs and initiatives to our members throughout the year.

New speakers are being added all the time! For the most up to date schedule of events and speakers, visit our website for the 2020 Symposium.
